

The Concurrently Companion

Episode 41: Let's hear from our listeners

Today's Companion reflects our desire to make you—your thoughts, questions, concerns, experiences—central to our ongoing conversation at Concurrently. We hope our questions will draw out your and your children/students' thoughts and questions regarding culture and current events. If you like, print it out to write in your answers and scan it to email. We'd love to see your brainstorming! Write us at: newscoach@wng.org.

Questions

What are you curious about? What questions do you have about how others think or experience the world? What questions do you have about other cultural contexts and how they compare and contrast to your own context and experiences?

Where do you see pieces of ideology and worldview (big or little details) in what you read or study? What questions do you have about worldview?

We talked about school as potential mission field. What are the "mission fields" (spheres in which the Lord has placed you as an agent of His good news, for you to display to others through word and deed) in your life? How can we come alongside you as you seek to engage your specific mission fields?

What are you reading right now? What is your favorite fiction and why? (Tell us what we need to have on our bookshelves!)

What is the most helpful tool we have used on our podcast? What tool do you want more of or to hear more about?

Anything else you'd like to add?

Scriptural anchors/provision

Not that I have already obtained this or am already perfect, but I press on to make it my own, because Christ Jesus has made me his own. — Philippians 3:12
